

The 31st Annual Network and Distributed System Security Symposium

The NDSS Symposium is a leading global security conference. It fosters information exchange among researchers and practitioners of computer, network, and distributed system security and encourages and enables the Internet community to apply, deploy, and advance the state of practical security technologies.

What to Expect

- Five-day in-person event Symposium and two days of co-located workshops and symposia, including three days of the main NDSS.
- Events totaling over 120 peer-reviewed papers.
- Invited speakers who are leaders in the field of systems security.
- Sponsor tables.
- Poster sessions.
- Networking breaks, lunches, and socials.

Attendees

Attendees include those interested in the practical aspects of network and distributed system security, with a focus on actual system design and implementation from around the world:

- University researchers, educators, and students.
