

The 33rd Annual Network and Distributed System Security Symposium

The NDSS Symposium is the second-ranked global cyber security conference. It fosters information exchange among researchers and practitioners of computer, network, and distributed system security. NDSS makes leading-edge research globally available, to advance the state of practical security technologies. NDSS proceedings are freely published to encourage adoption and deployment by the whole Internet community.

What to Expect

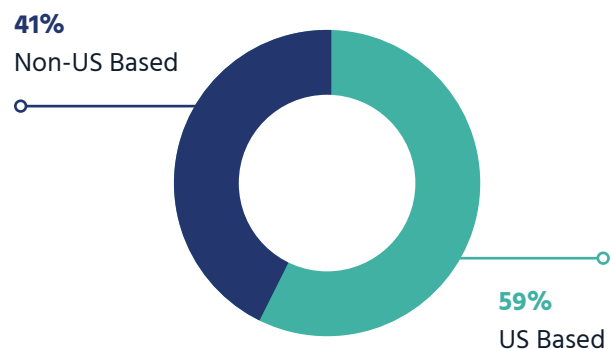

- Three days of NDSS Symposium and two days of co-located workshops.
- Events totaling over 250 peer-reviewed papers.
- Invited speakers who are leaders in the field of systems security.
- Sponsor exhibition.
- Poster sessions.
- Networking breaks, lunches, and socials.

Attendees

Attendees include those interested in the practical aspects of network and distributed system security, with a focus on actual system design and implementation from around the world:

- University researchers, educators, and students.

This year, for the first time, we are running a full fellowship program to give our fellows a richer and more rewarding experience before, during, and after the NDSS Symposium 2025.

With this program, we aim to encourage students from diverse communities to actively participate in the NDSS Symposium while bridging the gap between research and advocacy.

"The most significant change I have observed in myself as a result of the NDSS fellowship is the increased confidence I now have in my professional abilities, particularly in how I present myself."

—Ayushi Sharma

Co-Located Event Sponsorship and Tailored Packages

Every year, several related workshops and symposia take place alongside the NDSS Symposium. These co-located events take place on the Monday before and the Friday after the main symposium, focusing on specific areas of network security research. 2026 workshops will include:

- Workshop on the Security of Space and Satellite Systems (SpaceSec).
- Workshop on Measurements, Attacks, and Defenses for the Web (MADWeb).
- Workshop on Security and Privacy in Standardized IoT (SDIoTSec).

Tailored sponsorship packages are available to sponsor co-located events as well as the NDSS Symposium.

For more information about these packages, or to discuss sponsorship in general, please contact Sally Harvey, Senior Director, Corporate Partnerships, Internet Society at ndss-sponsor@elists.isoc.org
